PRIMARY NEXT TUESDAY

Three elections in a month! That's the way we do things in Florida. Democrats and Republicans will do battle for two new seats in the Florida legislature. The elections have nothing to do with present legislators—State Senator Ralph Blank, State Representative Emmett S. Roberts from Group 2 and State Representative Jerry Thomas from Group 1.

The suddenness of the election is brought about by the fact that state legislature will be convened early in April and the elections must be held and over in time to name the new members for the two new seats gained by Palm Beach county in the reapportionment deal.

3rd Bank For Belle Glade Is Planned

If present plans materialize, the City of Belle Glade will have three banks in the future. These, added to the Bank of Pahokee will make a total of four banks for a population of around 80,000 people in the Glades.

On a lot across the street from the Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce is a sign that reads: "Proposed site of Community National Bank." Organizers of the third bank in Belle Glade said Tuesday that an official of the federal government was in the Glades conducting an investigation into the proposal and need for another national bank. His recommendation will come later, it was pointed out.

The present bank in Belle Glade—Florida National Bank—is a national bank and a member of the Florida National group of banks with headquarters in Jacksonville and controlled by the DuPont interests with Ed Ball at the head of the concern. The recently chartered state bank in Belle Glade—"Bank of Belle Glade"—is temporarily headed by C. A. "Mutt" Thomas of Lake Harbor, who is also president of South Bay Growers in South Bay.

Two other banks are under construction in Palm Beach County. Citizens Bank of Palm Beach County is open and operating at Four Points in West Palm Beach. The new building is under construction. Central Bank of Palm Beach County is planned for a site on Okeechobee Road across from the Westward Shopping Center.

Some interesting items crop up now and then in the business and financial news columns of our daily papers.

On one day recently several of the canned food company stocks got an upward boost on the New York Stock Market. One scored a gain of $2.25 a share, or about 10 per cent on the quoted value. The reason: traders figured recent cold weather crop losses in Florida, California and Texas should cause a sharp reduction in fresh winter fruits and vegetables, and a consequent increase in demand for canned products.

A couple of days later General Motors reported the biggest net profit ever earned by any corporation—nearly 1½ Billion dollars and the stock rose to a new all-time high. So, because there has been so much comment recently about corporate profits being squeezed, I checked over the earnings report of U. S. Companies reported in the paper that day.

Here's what I found: of 30 net earnings reported for 1962, only 8 showed declines from 1961, 21 showed gains and one firm, reported nearly 3 million dollars net compared with a 1961 loss of close to 7 million, or an improvement in earnings of about 10 million dollars.

In spite of the limited number of reports which I checked, there were enough to indicate how mixed the profit picture is in American industry at this time.

You've probably seen some of the various explanations that have been given for the devastating cold weather that has been plaguing the northern hemisphere this winter.

Meteorologists seem to agree that a shift in the jet stream moving from west to east high above the earth allowed frigid arctic air to move down our way, but there agreement ends. Nobody seems to know what caused the wind currents to change course.

Various reasons for weather irregularities have been advanced from time to time—sun spots, volcanic eruptions and so on, but I've noticed many competent authorities have insisted for the past several years that nuclear explosions have NOT been responsible. On the other hand, their claim has been disputed by a few scientists; but the latter didn't get the publicity that the first group received.

Now I see that a well-known private forecaster, who has been operating for a number of years a successful weather service for business clients, believes that high altitude nuclear explosions by the U. S. and Russia affected the radiation belt around the earth, causing a speedup and change of course in the jet stream.

The high yield explosions of last July caused his staff to revise their long-range forecast and predict colder than normal weather for January. It looks to me like they hit it on the nose, and it's about time steps are taken to learn whether nuclear testing really does result in the miserable cold and storms that have swept so many countries.

The publisher of a feed industry trade journal recently stressed the need in American business for good salesmen to meet the aggressive competition in expanding world trade.

College students generally, he notes, are not interested in selling. A survey by Sales Management magazine, among a cross section of students in 123 American colleges, revealed only 1 male student in 17 is willing to try selling as a career.

When he took part in a panel discussion before all the agricultural students in one leading university, to point out the job opportunities in agriculture and its associated business, he found practically every student steered away from suggestions that selling is a good job.

Selling is a respected and highly lucrative profession, but somewhere along the line, business has been missing the boat in getting that story across to the young people preparing to embark on a career.

I note a new 4-H activity to be undertaken in Florida this year after several successful tryouts around the state last year. It's called the Town and Country Business Program, designed for older youths to study firms associated with the marketing of agricultural products, explore employment opportunities and learn the benefits of further training and education in what our economists call "agribusiness."

Right here, in contacts with youths participating in this kind of program, I think our Florida businessmen have an opportunity to create interest in selling as a career. Not everyone is qualified to be a research scientist or space wizard, but a lot of our young people have the makings of cracker-jack salesmen, and the proper guidance through college can graduate them with specialized knowledge that a good salesman requires.

Mike Cowart Gets Academy Award

Mike spent last weekend in Pahokee visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cowart.

"Today we need a nation of Minute Men citizens who regard the preservation of freedom as a basic purpose of their daily life"

—JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY

10 days after his inauguration as the 35th President of the United States.

Twenty years ago, in the dark, uneasy days before Pearl Harbor, the Minute Man of Concord, timeless symbol of our Nation's determination to defend its freedom, emerged as the emblem of the U. S. Savings Bonds Program. When war came, the Minute Man became the rallying force behind the huge and overwhelmingly successful effort to back our fighting men with War Bonds.

In this, the 20th anniversary year of Savings Bonds, the Minute Man of Concord calls all Americans to an unrelenting effort to help preserve our peace and freedom, threatened by forces more powerful and resourceful than those we faced in 1941. Though this effort will take many forms, one way open to all is the continued investment in Shares in America, U. S. Savings Bonds, by "citizens who regard the preservation of freedom as a basic purpose of their daily life."

MRS. DAVID RAMEY

Jeanine Mock Becomes Bride Of David Ramey In Church Ceremony Sat., Feb. 16

Miss Marjorie Jeanine Mock and David Williamson Ramey were united in marriage Saturday, Feb. 16, at 7 p. m. in an impressive double-ring, candlelight ceremony held in the First Baptist Church at Pahokee, with Rev. Guthrie Colvard, pastor, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Mock and the bridegroom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Ramey, all of Pahokee.

The altar was decorated for the event with floor baskets of white cymethums and gladioli against a background of potted palms. The scene was lighted by white cathedral tapers in graduated candelabra and the pews were marked by satin ribbons.

Mrs. Hugh Branch sang "With This Ring," "Because" and "The Wedding Prayer," accompanied by Mrs. Sheppard M. Pitts, Jr., organist, who also played the traditional wedding marches.

Mrs. Richard P. Kirby, Jr., matron of honor, wore a street-length gown of scarlet silk tulle with scooped neckline and capped sleeves. On her head she wore a large double bow, giving a bustle effect at the back. A nose-length veil was attached to the matching rose-shaped headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of peppermint carnations and ivy.

The four bridesmaids, Miss Marilyn Mock, sister of the bride, Mrs. Hugh G. Miller, III, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. John Thompson and Miss Cyndy Friend, all wore gowns fashioned identically to that of the matron of honor and carried similar bouquets.

The little Misses Karen Tillis and Terry Davenport, flower girls, dressed in white silk organza frocks scattered red rose petals along the aisle. Jon Mock, small brother of the bride, carried the two rings to the altar on a small heart-shaped satin pillow.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She wore a full-length ivory gown of peau-de-soie, the fitted bodice fashioned with scooped neckline and elbow-length sleeves, and the controlled bell skirt with bustle ending in an A-line wide train. The gown was enhanced with Alencon lace appliqued with seed pearls. The elbow-length bouffant veil of imported silk illusion was attached to a crown of pearls. With her cascade bouquet of white orchids and ivy, she carried the chiffon handkerchief which her mother had dangled in her wedding.

George B. Ramey served as his son's best man. Ushers were Hugh G. Miller, III, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, John T. Pickett, William B. Shirley and Hunter Latham.

Mrs. Mock chose for her daughter's wedding a street-length blue crepe dress with matching accessories and a white orchid corsage. Mrs. Ramey, mother of the bridegroom, wore a street-length beige dress of silver brocade with matching jacket and a white orchid corsage.

The bride's parents were hosts at the reception at their home, 971 East Main St., following the ceremony. On the table with the tiered wedding cake was an arrangement of white gladioli and tiny mums. A large bouquet of red roses and white snapdragons was in the room where the gifts were displayed. The other decorations featured arrangements of white gladioli, carnations, mums, baby's breath and fern.

The hosts were assisted at the reception by Mrs. Robert D. Apelgren; also by Mrs. Leon Spooner, who greeted guests at the door; Mrs. Peter Newton, who was at the bride's couch; Mrs. Jennie McKinstry, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Welker, who served the cake; and Mrs. John Starling, who poured at the punch bowl.

Others assisting were Mrs. Lewis Friend, Mrs. William D. Howard, Mrs. R. R. Long, Mrs. Wilma Alley, Mrs. Joe Hatton, Jr., and Mrs. Earl Maxson.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of Pahokee High School. She was a member of the first class to receive BS degrees in nursing from the University of

Korean Veterans Hereby Notified

The general deadline for vocational rehabilitation training for disabled Korean Conflict veterans has been eliminated, according to the Veterans Administration.

The deadline for completion of such training formerly was January 31, 1964, or nine years after being separated from the armed forces, which ever was earlier, L. V. McClelland, Veterans Service Officer, said.

Under terms of a law passed by the last Congress, a veteran now has a full nine years after discharge from the armed forces in which to complete his training, with no cut-off deadline at an earlier date.

Eligible disabled Korean Conflict veterans may receive training, of such character and length as necessary to restore their ability to work, up to four years and in some cases exceeding four years.

Before starting their training they must be interviewed and tested by VA counselors to determine their aptitudes and interests, McClelland explained.

The training will be at government expense and in addition the veteran may receive subsistence allowances as well as the disability compensation.

The eligible veterans may enroll in schools or colleges, take on-the-job training or institutional on-the-farm training or enter other programs which combine class room and on-the-job training.

W. H. Pruitt Seeks To Be Legislator

Among the candidates seeking one of Palm Beach County's new legislative seats is William H. Pruitt, West Palm Beach attorney, who has qualified as a Democratic candidate for state representative from Group Three.

Pruitt, who is president of the Junior Bar Association, since graduation from Miami University's law school in 1955, has gained considerable attention for active participation in community affairs—both in his church and civic club associations.

He is a director of the Downtown Kiwanis Club in West Palm Beach; member of the YMCA board of directors, member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Masonic Lodge.
